ILC Training

Customised professional development for your staff

Our trainers are experienced health professionals with specialist knowledge in:

- Assistive equipment and technology
- Communication
- Home modifications
- Inclusive technology in schools

Training by allied health professionals with specialist knowledge and experience

The Independent Living Centre WA has been providing services within the aged care, disability and community sectors for over 35 years.

Our health professionals are qualified to deliver training on a range of topics covering the areas of assistive equipment and technology; home modifications; and assistive learning technologies in education.

We host a range of workshops based on the training needs of the disability, aged care, health and special education sectors.

Our training team also works closely with organisations and schools to design customised training based on your priorities and desired learning outcomes for your staff.

“Fiona and Amy were terrific for my group of Polytechnic West Ed Support Students. They really had a huge knowledge of the products and made the sessions fun and interactive.”
Ellie Tompson, Lecturer Polytechnic West

Who is our training suitable for?

- For health professionals, we offer training to increase your knowledge and skills in the areas of assistive equipment, technology and home modifications.
- For schools, teachers and education assistants, we offer customised training to support schools to implement educational technologies for the classroom for students with disabilities, complex communication needs and learning difficulties to participate, learn and communicate to the best of their ability.
- For organisations and staff in the disability, health and aged care sectors, our training will upskill support worker staff to ensure up to date knowledge on the range of assistive equipment and technology, including how to operate and use equipment, technology and communication aids effectively with clients.
